TAXI DRIVERS TO STRIKE AS PROTEST AGAINST NEW "SNEAK CLOCKS" ON CABS

Long Hours Another Reason
Why 720 Men Threaten to Tie Up "Yellows."

COMPANY PLANS TRUCE.

Rush of Business, Superintendent
Declares, Is Responsible for Overworking of Men.

A strike of the 720 drivers employed by the Yellow Taxicab Company of No. 19 West Sixty-second street was said today to be only a matter of a few days' delay. The strike will tie up every car of the 500 in the company's big garage at Forty-ninth street and Eighth avenue, according to the boast of the disgruntled drivers. The officials of the company admit that so serious would be this contingency that they are doing everything in their power to avert threatened trouble.

The two causes of discontent among the chauffeurs are long hours and the "sneak clock." There is nothing mysterious about the long hours. General Superintendent B. A. Chisholm himself told an Evening World reporter today that recently the crush of business had necessitated the imposing of long hours on the men. But as to the "sneak clock," that is as mysterious and little understood an instrument of magic for the chauffeurs as Aladdin's lamp.

It is called a "Speedograph" or a Jones recorder, two types of checking-up taximeters being used. Recently the company purchased enough of these little tell-tales to attach to about two-fifths of the number of cabs in service. The superintendent of drivers uses his discretion in attaching these little mechanical secret revealers to the cabs of suspected drivers.

HOW THE "SNEAK CLOCK" GETS DRIVERS' GOAT.

The "Speedograph" is an instrument which is attached to the front axle of the taxicab near the left wheel, and the revolutions of this wheel operate the instrument, just as the right wheel "feels" the taximeter which is exposed to the wondering view of the fare. The "sneak clock" not only tells when the cab leaves the central garage and when it returns, but registers just how fast and how slow the machine has proceeded during the whole day out, how far it has run and how many stops it has made.

The little machine is sealed in a box by the inspector before the taxi leaves the garage, and its record is taken out by the inspector without the chauffeur having a single opportunity to see what it says for him or against him.

"That sneak clock tells everything we do except what kind of booze we drink," was the disgusted comment of one chauffeur at the company's central garage today.

The company's hard and fast rule is that at no time shall their taxis make more than eighteen miles an hour. If a car comes or speed-mad

OVER SEA AND LAND DARING DON JAIME PURSUES SENORITA

Persistent Swain Still Trails
Fair Rose of Mexico—
He'll Get 'Er Yet!

Don Jaime Calvoza of Mexico, most persistent and constant of modern lovers, arrived today from Gibraltar in "result of the fair Senorita Rosara," who, who reached these shores early last week and was whisked away again by her stern father, Don Rafael Limon, millionaire Mexican landowner, who has been taking her all over the world to avoid the pursuit of Don Jaime.

The young man, whose father is just as rich as Don Rafael Limon, has been on the trail a year, following his love to Barcelona, Madrid, Egypt, the Holy Land, Rome, Marseilles and Paris. Somehow after each disappearance of the Limons from a city Don Jaime always got word telling him how to follow. From the soft sighs and the sparkling enthusiasm of Senorita Rosara during her brief stay here between sailings, it ought not to be hard to guess who was aiding him to be as wise a pursuer.

Don Jaime Calvoza, who is very dark and handsome and lights cigarettes and throws them away in rapid fire succession, was told by a reporter of The Evening World on his arrival here that Don Rafael Limon was ahead of him with the treasure of his heart.

THAT DEAR DON NEARLY KISSES A REPORTER.

But when the reporter took him aside and gave him a certain soft spoken message left for him by the senorita as she passed there was the spectacle of an agile newspaper man dodging around a handsome young Spaniard, who seemed bound to embrace him and plant a salute of gratitude on his brow.

"It is not true that Don Rafael Limon despises me for that I am a tradesman," said Don Jaime Calvoza. "It is not for such a reason that he refuses to me, but because he is a tradesman."

From the ends of his delicately manicured fingertips the young man wafted a kiss, this time to the southward.

"Don Rafael Limon is a very fine man. It must be that his not-so-good speaking of the English was misunderstood."

"It is this only, nothing else: I have not the Castilian blood. The Castilian is of the belief that the blood of the Castilian is so pure that it must never mix."

RISKED HIS LIFE TO SAVE TIME IN CHASE.

The young man's pursuit, on his last dash, was not without the element of danger. Learning at Barcelona that Don Rafael Limon had sailed on the Montserrat of the Spanish line, with the Senorita Rosara and his other two daughters, Don Jaime Calvoza made all haste to Gibraltar. The Guilemo, on which he arrived today, was just passing out, and he chartered a tiny launch and pursued her in a storm until he was taken aboard.

Don Jaime Calvoza, all smiles and eagerness, sought directions here for making the quickest possible trip to Mexico City overland and hurried away. He may yet be on the station platform to greet the trowling Don Rafael Limon and the Senorita Rosara when they reach home.

WED AT MIDNIGHT IN AN AUTOMOBILE, DRENCHED BY RAIN

This Was Romantic Setting
Chosen by California Widow in Second Venture.

NIGHT COP IS WITNESS.

He Stands in Mud to See Pair
Tied by Discomfited
Fishkill Justice.

Mrs. E. Brinkerhoff Sanford, a widow of San Francisco, Cal., knew the ordinary way of getting married, and it didn't appeal to her. This time, she wanted "something very romantic," as she herself described it, so she went to Fishkill-on-the-Hudson.

With her prospective husband, Addison Clark Angus of Briarcliff, she drove into the little town at about eight o'clock last night, but to make sure of the "romantic" setting, they waited until midnight to have the knot tied. Justice of the Peace Frank S. Colwell married them at that hour while he stood on the running board of their high powered touring car at the corner of Ferry and Beacon streets, Fishkill, with Night Policeman Theodore Morris nonchalantly swinging his night stick as he officiated as the sole witness.

Town Clerk Conway, issued the couple a license at 9 o'clock last night and they drove out into the country to the north of Fishkill, returning shortly before midnight.

"We went to see that we have a very romantic wedding," Mrs. Sanford explained.

Conway thought of bowers of roses, lighting effects and flower girls, but the thoughts of the widow were running along different lines. When the touring car on which they said they had come from Maine whizzed back into town, just before midnight, Mr. Angus, who had given his age as twenty-six, and his home as Briarcliff, N. Y., picked up Policeman Morris.

"We want to find a preacher or a Justice of the Peace," Angus explained. "I'd prefer to have a Justice," Mrs. Sanford added, "no church affair this time."

So Morris piloted them to the residence of Justice Colwell, and they got him out of bed.

The lighting effects consisted of one sixteen-candle-power electric bulb, swinging in the wind at the corner, and there was added a touch of realism in the shape of a downpour of rain.

Justice Colwell had great difficulty in appreciating the romance of the affair. He wanted them to come into the house. Through the combined pressure of bride and bridegroom, however, he finally consented to stand on the running board and officiate.

"I do hope we haven't disturbed you too much with my little romantic wedding," said Mrs. Angus after the ceremony.

"No, not at all," responded Justice Colwell, as he pocketed the groom's proffered ten-spot, and registered a solemn hope that pneumonia wouldn't take it away from him.

With the ceremony completed, Mr. and Mrs. Angus started for New York.

THREE KILLED BY TRAIN.

Car Crash Into Moving Van With

Fatal Result.

CAMDEN, N. J., Sept. 15.—Two men and a boy were killed at Camden, twenty-eight miles south of this city late last night, when a Pennsylvania Railroad electric train struck a big moving van in which they were taking a load of furniture from Vineland, N. J., to Philadelphia.

The driver and owner of the van was Joseph Caplin. The other two victims have not yet been identified. The accident occurred during a heavy rain storm. Two horses attached to the van were killed and the first car of the electric train was badly damaged.

MEXICANS HOLD AMERICANS FOR $100,000 RANSOM?

Rebel Leader Salazar After Demanding $1,000,000 to Save Mine Takes Men Prisoners.

DOUGLAS, Ariz., Sept. 15.—Inez Salazar, the rebel leader who captured 23 Americans Saturday, demanded $100,000 from the company owning the El Tigre mine, on threat of destroying the plant. It is said the rebels carried off a large amount of bullion, $200,000, and an American was taken prisoner and is still held by them.

While four hundred Federal troops were within six miles of the camp today, no word has been received of an attempt to retake it. One building, containing the saloon, was burned by the rebels.

MEXICO CITY, Sept. 15.—Strong forces of troops were held in readiness today to suppress any anti-Mexican outbreak which might develop in connection with the Independence Day celebrations. The national palace, the President's headquarters, in particular, was heavily guarded by detachments of tried loyalty.

When with the words "Viva independence, viva libertad, viva Mexico," Madero raised the historic liberty bell with which Hidalgo called the people to revolt 102 years ago the people watched and listened in gloomy silence. The President is threatened by two dangers—the persistence of the rebels' activities and the growing strength of the reaction in ex-President Diaz's favor.

WIND KEEPS HYDROPLANES OUT OF MOTORBOAT RACES

Because of the stiff wind which ripped down the Hudson, this afternoon, the frail little speed boats of the hydroplane class that competed in the international motorboat races at Huntington, two weeks ago, did not venture to race in the first day's meet of the National Motorboat "America" meeting at the Yonkers Yacht club today.

But some class exhibitions were put up by boats of the heavier type in the first two races held.

In class B for cruising boats, involving the motorboat championships for boats of fifty feet and over, Frank C. Haynes of the Litchfield Club carried off the honors with his Avon. The Avon defeated the Capelin of M. F. Dennis of New York, holder of the record in last year's race. The Avon made the course of 2 1/2 miles in 1:57.

James Simpson's Peter Pan also won the race for class E, cruising boats, between forty and sixty feet in length, over Mr. Butler's Sundrift. The holder of the trophy, and the A. Mitz, a kerosene boat owned by A. Mitz of New York.

SACRIFICE OF JEWELS BY MRS. SICKLES FAILS TO RECONCILE GENERAL

Attorneys Deny War Veteran and Wife Have Patched Up Trouble.

Although the wife of Gen. Daniel E. Sickles last week went to his rescue financially to save his collection of antiques and mementoes by pawning upwards of $300 worth of her jewelry, thus staving off a sheriff's sale to satisfy a judgment against the general, it was learned this afternoon that her act did not bring about a reconciliation between the couple.

It was stated on behalf of Mrs. Sickles that she had not acted with a view to causing a reconciliation. She had undertaken to save her husband's remarkable collection merely as an act due to him because of their past relations and her ability to relieve a temporary embarrassment.

Mrs. Sickles, however, since meeting the claim against her husband, had tried to call upon him with her son, Stanton, it was learned from friends of the family, but had been turned away by representatives of Gen. Sickles.

STEFANSSON SEES BROADWAY AFTER DISCOVERING RACE

Explorer Lived Two Weeks on Chew of Tallow Candle; Wants Square Meal.

Vilhjalmi Stefansson, Arctic explorer, who discovered in the north polar region several bands of "white Eskimos," and all without standing treat for a single gunpowder, returned to New York today after an absence of nearly four and a half years. He went at once to the American Museum of Natural History, which sent him on the expedition with Dr. R. M. Anderson, the Museum's zoologist.

Orders to Stefansson when he left New York on April 22, 1908, were to go far into the northland and discover a tribe that had never been seen a white man. Instead of his appearance creating a sensation he found himself with these white Eskimos, and the only ones to attract special attention were Stefansson's helpers, Mackenzie River Eskimos, who claim to be civilized.

Stefansson is modest. He didn't say a word about living a fortnight on a chew of tallow candle with a little seal oil for a chaser or how many leeches he had to slip by in order to reach his destination. He was loath indeed to say anything about his hardships, although they were many. He collected 20,000 specimens, which are now being made ready for shipment to the museum.

From New York Stefansson and Dr. Anderson went to Winnipeg and then to Edmonton by rail.

ICE SHUT OFF SUPPLIES AND AMMUNITION.

Then they went overland 100 miles to the head of navigation on the Athabasca River, up which they paddled 2,000 miles. They reached the mouth of the Mackenzie River late in June. They wintered at the mouth of the Colville River on the northern coast of Alaska, their supplies of photographic and writing material, along with matches and ammunition, failing to reach them because of the ice. The next winter was spent at Cape Parry, and that spring—1910—Stefansson started east with three Eskimos to search for unknown tribes.

Their sleds carried only three weeks' supplies, and the members of the party expected to get their living out of the country. A 250-mile barren stretch brought untold hardship. Food and search and scavenged until at last animal

WITNESS OF MURDER IDENTIFIES GUNMEN'S PAL AS ACCOMPLICE

Eye-Witness Kreske Declares Kramer, Found in Raid on "Lefty" and
"Gyp" Flat, Warned Him
Away From Metropole.

CAPTORS BEFORE GOFF
IN JOHN DOE HEARING

Dougherty and Detective Deny Holding Out Alleged Letters Discovered—Prisoners and Wives Held.

Evidence corroborating the theory that, in furtherance of the plot to assassinate Herman Rosenthal, the street in front of the Metropole was kept clear of pedestrians and vehicles after midnight on July 16, was obtained unexpectedly by the District Attorney today when "Lefty Louie" Rosenberg and "Gyp the Blood" Horowitz were arraigned before Justice Goff to plead to the indictment charging them with murder.

With them were arraigned their wives, Lillian Rosenberg and Lillian Horowitz and Sam Kramer, alias Kahn, who was caught in the flat with Rosenberg and Horowitz at Glendale on Saturday evening. Louis Kreske, a waiter who has made several important identifications in the Rosenthal case, was in the courtroom in charge of two of the District Attorney's men.

Kreske partially identified Rosenberg and Horowitz as two of four men he saw in the gray murder car. Then he positively identified Kramer as a man he met and talked with in Forty-third street, near Broadway, a short time before the shooting.

IDENTIFIED AS PICKET FOR ASSASSINS.

"That man," said Kreske, pointing to Kramer, "was standing in Forty-third street as I turned in from Broadway. He asked me what I was doing there and told me to hurry along."

"I told him I had as much right there as he had. He told me to move on or I would get hurt. I didn't move on, but stayed there and saw the shooting and saw men running away. I couldn't be mistaken about this man, Kramer, because he stood talking to me with his face close to mine and there was plenty of light."

Previous to this identification, the two women and Kramer had been held in $2,500 bail each as material witnesses. But the association of Kramer with the actual crime led the District Attorney's office to take steps to have him so held that he will be unable to secure his release on bail.

In an attempt to show that police officers who assisted in the arrest of "Lefty Louie" Rosenberg and "Gyp the Blood" Horowitz on Saturday concealed important letters found in the flat in which the fugitives were captured, Assistant District Attorney Frank Moss, acting on instructions from District Attorney Whitman telegraphed from Hot Springs, Ark., fled on proceeding in secret. The object of the inquiry was to establish the truth or falsity of statements to the effect that detectives found thirty-five or forty letters in the flat which have not been turned over to the District Attorney.

The only foundation for the statement lies in stories printed in morning newspapers. In the course of the investigation today Deputy Police Commissioner Dougherty and all his subordinates who took part in the arrest of search of the flat positively denied that any letters were found. Mr. Moss took steps to subpoena reporters who wrote accounts of the search of the flat containing the accusation that letters were found.

BRIDES HELD AS WITNESSES IN HEAVY BAIL.

The John Doe proceeding followed a brief session of the extraordinary term of the Supreme Court, with Justice Goff presiding. Rosenberg and Horowitz were arraigned to answer to the indictment charging them with the murder of Herman Rosenthal. Charles G. F. Wahl, counsel for the prisoners, asked for delay, and the pleading was postponed until Wednesday.

Immediately following the brief court proceedings Mr. Moss, who is in charge of the case while District Attorney Whitman is in Hot Springs, Ark., handed to Justice Goff an information and asked the Court to investigate it as a Magistrate. Justice Goff immediately repaired to his private chambers, where he began an investigation.

Although the proceedings were surrounded with secrecy, it did not take observers long to get the trend of them. Detective Casassa, who took a leading part in the pursuit and capture of "Lefty" and "Gyp," was the first witness called. After a few minutes Deputy Commissioner Dougherty was summoned, and he, in turn, called his secretary, Mr. Young, who produced a box containing, Dougherty said, every scrap of paper found in the search of the flat.

Then Detectives McKenna and Meyer, who assisted in the arrest, and Sergeant Young and Detectives Patrick Slavin and Leonard Woodie, who
